Key client case study

A privately owned tech company wanting to expand its horizons

Referred to us by an existing client of Hawksford, this client was looking for accounting, bookkeeping, taxation and audit services. The company is a Fintech business, developing card payment systems.

Currently the client is seeking FCA (Financial Conduct Authority) registration and undergoing testing to receive licensing from the major card payment providers. They are working on developing software and registered its trademark with Intellectual Property Office. Though the company is registered in the UK, it has international presence and is planning to operate its servers from different countries.

For them, it is important to have a boutique approach, as well as high quality work and assistance on building the bookkeeping system, answering the needs of the future business, involving complex large volume transactions.

Our solution:

They came to us after having the first year accounts and audit done by another firm of accountants. Dissatisfied with the service they had received, Hawksford were able to meet interests of the business by putting in order accounting documentation and organising appropriate bookkeeping systems, as well as resolving outstanding issues with UK tax authorities.

Due to future FCA registration it was important that audit services were also provided. By utilising our extensive network of auditors and acting as the central point of liaison, we ensured the clients accounts were audited to meet tight deadlines.

Services provided:

Bookkeeping, accounts and corporation tax preparation, payroll, assistance on statutory work and general advice.

The company's shareholder is a national of Russia, residing in Turkey.
